LACK OF ALBERTA REGULATIONS

Five Creston Hunters Charged Under Alberta Game Act

Five Creston hunters are "flaming mad" over the ineptitude of the Alberta game department who failed to properly inform them of the necessary export permits required to bring game birds into British Columbia.

Charged are: D. Dressel with attempting to export birds into B.C.; Neil Roth with unlawfully exporting birds into B.C.; Douglas Kinney with having no export permit; Vera Wright not having a permit.

All local hunters were stopped by Canadian Wildlife officials in the province of Alberta near the B.C. border.

No Information
Douglas Kinney said he and his party wrote Alberta officials and received by registered mail the hunting licenses and papers to hunt in Alberta but no information relative to the necessity of an export permit was included. Most B.C. hunters who are acquainted with "export permits" interpret them as game going into the USA or some foreign country.

The Creston hunters were returning in separate parties following a hunt at Carmagnay, Alberta. All hunters interviewed said they were unaware of the export permit which is a free document.

As a result of their being charged, all volunteered to return to Lethbridge, Alberta where the export licence could be obtained but were refused. All guns and game were confiscated and the charges laid. Court will be held in Blairmore, Alberta.

Mr. Kinney feels that if an export permit is required some should have been issued with license as a special note relative to an export licence issued.

As Mr. Kinney pointed out — they voluntarily stopped at the game station and no game crossed the Alberta-B.C. boundary.

He also said the matter has been referred to Lorne Nicolson, M.L.A. Nelson-Creston; Bob Briscoe, Conservative candidate who phoned lawyers in Calgary, Alberta. Other officials have been notified in preparation for the court case scheduled for Blairmore, Alberta.

CROW - UNITED BEGIN PREPARATIONS FOR 1972-73 FOOTHILLS' LEAGUE HOCKEY SEASON

With the 1972-73 Foothills' hockey season fast approaching, Crow-United began their re-organization with a general meeting Friday, October 3, 1972.

Some newly installed members of the executive include Ted Krycka, president; Chick Roughhead, John Holby, first and second vice presidents respectively and Earl Schmidt, manager.

Lost to the club for this season's operations are former president, the Watson, coach Richard Knight and Max Brown, secretary, treasurer, now devoting their time and talents to Junior hockey. Harold Gamble, last seasons manager will not participate at this time.

All will be missed throughout the current season as these fellows did a tremendous job in the past. However, several officers from last seasons executive still remain and it's hoped that the re-organization will be completed before the team takes to the ice.

Ted Krycka, who attended last week's league meeting in Pincher Creek advised that Claresholm and Port Medford have withdrawn from the league and that teams from Fernie and Taber were accepted in consideration of a six team south.

All will be missed throughout the current season as these fellows did a tremendous job in the past. However, several officers from last seasons executive still remain and it's hoped that the re-organization will be completed before the team takes to the ice.

A 30 game schedule with each team meeting their opponents six times, three at home and away. Mr. Krycka further advised that ice would be available in the Coleman arena, about the middle of October and it was hoped that practices would commence either Monday, October 16 or Wednesday, October 18.

Any interested players wishing to gain a berth with Crow-United should contact either the "Grand Union" or Ray Reghenas 425-6622, Sparwood.

Several veterans are expected to attend training camp along with some new younger and eager prospects and manager Earl Schmidt is hoping that this season will see Crow-United move a little further up in the standings than last years third place finish and then only to be bounced out in the league semi-finals in five games by the Sulphur-Kings who went on to take the league title.

The two new entries, Fernie and Taber are expected to supply the rest of the league with some strong opposition as their rosters include an excellent contingent of players, most of whom are already familiar with Foothills' play having previously tussled with different teams in the league.

In addition, the calibre of hockey exhibited by these teams during exhibition and other league play has more than proven that they can play and belong in this league.

A further meeting was held on Wednesday, October 11. At that time the league schedule was finalized and offered for print. It is hoped that copies of the schedule will be available for distribution prior to November 3. Remember the Crow-United camp is open to any interested or prospective intermediate hockey player in the Crownest area and information regarding ice, arena, practice times, etc., can be obtained from either the Grand Union, Coleman or Ray Reghenas 425-6622, Sparwood.

Regulations Tightened

WASHINGTON — The House of Representatives has passed stripping regulations which the United States coal industry and some congressmen say could cut surface coal operations in half.

The legislation, passed, places the burden on an operator to demonstrate that he can reclaim the land as a condition for receiving a strip-mining permit.

The bill also contains a controversial provision banning surface mining on slopes exceeding 25 degrees.

Chairman Wayne N. Aspinall (Dem. Colo.) said the bill could shut down about half the mines in the Appalachian region of the eastern United States where the majority of strip mines are located.

Carl Baggen, president of the National Coal Association, called the bill a "punitive, unrealistic measure which would reduce the nation's production of coal by 25 per cent almost overnight."

Tanker Slides Off Highway

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Cozzi and grandson Mark Coleman had their supper disturbed on Tuesday, October 10, when a large crude oil tanker truck came close to crashing into their living room. The truck was going west with a load of oil. The highway was in treacherous condition at the time.

The truck was driven by Robert Cummings of Calgary. A brake problem occurred and the truck slid off the highway. Unit was owned by Pine Tree Petroleum Distributors of Calgary and Edmonton.

Joey Joseph To Pilot Crow-United

At a recent meeting of the Crow-United hockey organization, Joey Joseph was engaged as team coach for the coming 1972-73 Foothills' season.

Joey joined three seasons, in the nets, for Crow-United sharing dual goal tending duties during the 1968-69 season with Mel Tjue then in 1969-70 he completed the entire schedule and capped the Vezina trophy both years running.

The following season Joey shared the net-minding duties with Rod Naegele and were runners up for the league trophy. Joey has many years of hockey behind him having played with the senior Grand's Legionnaires and serving a stint with junior hockey. It's expected that Joey will engage another Crow-United player as his assistant. The name to be released next week.

The team is now holding practice sessions and any interested player wishing to gain a berth with the club should turn out for practice.

The league schedule was approved at a meeting in Pincher last Wednesday and has been submitted for print. Copies are expected before league play begins.

Crow-United's first encounter will be a home and home series with the Fernie Rangers, a new entry into the league this year. These games will be announced next week.

With the advent of Junior (A) hockey in the Pass and the decision to play all home games this season in the Coleman arena, the team will operate under the name of Coleman Grands. The name has been synonymous over past decades and it is hoped it will continue to do so. The change has been suggested with the league and will become effective prior to Crow-United's first game.

It's Your Organization

Once Fall and Winter rolls around, clubs and organizations start their monthly meetings again. Was your group what you wanted it to be last year? Did you go to all the meetings? Get involved in whatever the projects and discussions were about?

Clubs serve several functions. They provide a social setting where friends can visit, relaxing in each others company for a few hours. They provide services to the community—contributions to charitable causes, catering, perhaps keeping a hall in good repair. They provide a psychological outlet — you get away from the household routine, put on a fresh dress, and perhaps come home with new things "to think about and a happier outlook."

If your club seems to be decreasing in numbers, having irregular attendance problems or failing to satisfy your needs, maybe it's time to ask why? What's wrong? How can it be improved?

Now's the time for program planning. Most clubs have things they do every year — a Christmas party for the neighbourhood, a trip to visit the senior citizens' home, a clean-up bee at the local community center. But these projects take only a little meeting time, and other activities of interest need to be developed.

Almost everyone is interested in something different. Find out what these interests are. Maybe one of your members took a trip last summer. Why not involve her in the program by asking her to show her slides. Provide maps and some extra information about the local conditions, industries, people's habits, and you've all gained something.

Perhaps you're curious to know just what happens to property if someone passes away without a will, what the Debtor's Assistance Board can do for people with financial problems, whether or not you have any legal right to your spouse's property even if he should wish to sell it. These and other questions are answered in booklets put out by the Alberta Women's Bureau, Legislative Building, Edmonton and are available to you free of charge. Could this provide a useful and educational program? Involving your members is one of the best ways to ensure their attendance and interest. That means making sure everyone takes part in planning and carrying out your monthly programs and your major projects. Involvement stimulates interest — give everyone the opportunity. It's your organization — make it worthwhile.

THE BIG TRAIN ROBBERY

Constable Frewin who was in civilian clothes, then went into the cafe to size the men up. The only persons seen by him were two men sitting, one on each side of a table in a small booth, both occupied with reading.

Constable Frewin noticed that one had heavy black hair and a cast in one eye, which answered the description of one of the bandits.

This information he imparted to his two comrades who were outside on the street. It was then arranged that Const. Bailey guard the rear exit, while Usher and Frewin, having first unlimbered their revolvers, went into the cafe at the front door, and sprang to the booth where the men were sitting.

Frewin ordered the men to put up their hands, informing them they were police officers, and that they were under arrest.

Instead of responding to the request, they began reaching for their guns, Arkoff grinding his teeth in an animal like way, saying, "What's the matter — What's the matter?" at the same time extracting a luger automatic from his coat pocket. Before Arkoff had time to level his weapon, Frewin, now fully aware that a fight was pending, immediately fired several shots into the right arm of George Arkoff, with a view of preventing him from using his revolver.

Usher had covered Tom Bassoff, who was sitting on the opposite side of the table had also drawn a revolver. But for some reason he did not wish to fire, probably thinking he could take his man alive, as it is against the rules of the Mounted Police to shoot unless in case of imminent danger to one's life.

Constable Bailey who was at the back door, hearing the shooting, rushed through the kitchen with drawn revolver, and to the front of the booth. As the 32 Browning automatic which Frewin was using ran out of ammunition, he backed towards the front door to unlimber his 38 service revolver, and made way for Constable Bailey.

The momentary halt gave the bandits the chance they were looking for. Arkoff, although badly wounded was standing hunched up in the corner of the booth, temporarily recovered from the effects of Frewin's fusillade, holding his Arkoff, with a view of preventing him from using his revolver.

Preventive Social Services

By CHARLES T. GALE

There is a lot of interest today in the social problems connected with drug abuse. However, when all the popular drugs are named and classified under the effects described, the number one drug of those commonly misused, is still alcohol. According to the Drug and Alcohol Commission, 75% of the population drinks — it is a socially accepted practice. However, 5% to 7% of these drinkers will become alcoholics.

Early stages of alcoholism are recognizable: The pre-alcoholic has a different attitude toward alcohol. He begins to use alcohol more and more, and his change in feelings and mood that it gives him. The opportunity to drink becomes of greater importance than the occasion. Who comes or what the entertainment is, is secondary to the opportunity of having a few drinks.

Gulping drinks and sneaking drinks on the side are part of the pattern as well. This person soon recognizes that he is not drinking like others and he begins to feel guilty. And because he feels guilty, he does not want to talk about the wonderful party and how much liquor was drunk.

There may be blackouts at this stage. There are periods of apparently normal functioning but little or no memory of what happened between work and home. More and more time is spent thinking about drinking. More and more he finds his mind preoccupied with drinking. Where drinking used to be a pleasure, it now becomes a necessity.

There are people available with a good understanding of alcoholism, who are willing to talk to you. There are local telephone numbers in the classified ad section under Alcoholics Anonymous, that you can call for information and discussion of your own drinking patterns.

If you are aware that you have a drinking problem, or that you identify with some of these early symptoms that I have outlined, that is half the battle. There are a lot of resources available both inside and outside your own community to help you.

kept to social occasions, now it is done on most, all occasions. Where one drink used to be enough, now it is 2-3-5 or more.

If these danger signs are not heeded and no change in attitude occurs, this person is in danger of becoming an alcoholic and ending up in progressive psychosis which is allowed to go unchecked, will lead to the person's death.

The unfortunate thing about alcoholism, however, is that the alcoholic is often the last person to know that he has a problem. The pattern of refusing to see what is happening, of not talking about drinking, the way of handling guilty feelings, this is the start of a system of alibis, of rationalization that grows along with the alcoholism.

It is a pattern of making excuses and believing the excuses. Apart from the alcohol itself, this is probably the greatest single factor in the development of alcoholism.

Academic Garbage

Newspapermen have to live with the certainty that every story quoting an expert as saying something is "true," will sooner or later be contradicted by another story, with an expert declaring who's discovered it's false.

Most of these experts are university professors who's only method of gaining notoriety and making the news is to utter some profound philosophy. Then there are those professors who contradict the issues.

Others fall in the field of questionable professional economists, research and medical men, who venture out of their sphere of healing the sick and "lay" politicians, who become experts the day after they are elected.

Editors and newspaper readers must accept these mind-bogglers with the same equanimity that they face the growing list of good things in life that are found to be bad for them, if not cancer-producing.

But there ought to be a limit.

A story in a newspaper recently quoted an expert as having discovered the ultimate course of a disease is unaffected by the stage at which it is discovered. In other words, an ounce of prevention is not, after all, worth a pound of cure.

In our opinion, this time they've gone too far. Without waiting for the inevitable further expert to contradict the story, we reject it out of hand.

These experts must be stopped in their insidious drive to turn everything upside down. Why, the next thing they'll try is to convince us that the truth in these matters isn't somewhere in between, but somewhere but there where nobody's been yet, let alone contradicted.

A MAN WHO COUNTS IN THE PARTY THAT CARES

JOE CLARK, 33, of Edson, is the Progressive Conservative candidate in Rocky Mountain federal riding. He is a free-lance journalist, and frequent contributor to the CBC and the Alberta newspapers. He was born and raised in High River, the son and grandson of foothills newspapermen. Joe Clark has taken an active interest in federal and provincial politics since the first Diefenbaker election in 1957. For three years, he was Executive Assistant to ROBERT STANFIELD in Ottawa. He has also been a close personal assistant to PETER LOUGHEED and DAVIE FULTON. He is a man who counts in the party that cares about Western Canada.

"I intend to be a good constituency M.P., available to every part of this big riding.

But I will do more than that.

First, I want to be a spokesman for the spirit of Rocky Mountain Riding . . . a spokesman for the initiative, self-reliance and independence that is found everywhere in the towns and farms and construction camps here.

I want to provide that missing voice.

Second, I intend to get things done for Rocky Mountain in a way that is not being done now . . . to make Ottawa understand what the people of Western Alberta want and need . . . to get results."

DISTRICT MLA SUPPORTS LEGALIZED MARIJUANA

Resident Trail MLA Chris D'Arcy says he is concerned about young people — yet he favors legalization of marijuana.

Mr. D'Arcy told foster parents Monday the heroin traffic at Trail is worse than people realize. He said he is still satisfied that use of marijuana is not addictive and does not lead to use of hard drugs.

"I have never tried marijuana but not because I don't approve of it. I haven't tried it because I don't smoke and it might bring me back into the habit of smoking."

MONETARY REFORM

SOCIAL CREDIT SAYS:

- 1 The individual is the most important factor in organized society (and is a divinely-created being with both spiritual and physical potentials and needs, has certain inalienable rights which must be respected and preserved).
- 2 The major function of democratic government in organized society is to secure for the people the results they want from the management of their public affairs (as far as such results are physically possible and morally right).
- 3 We need security with freedom — material security alone is not enough.
- 4 Whatever is physically possible and desirable and morally right can and should be made financially possible.

Continued from Page Two

At the request of Colonel Macleod, chief of the CPR police, three bloodhounds, namely, Lightning, Dynamite and Dan, the property of Sheriff Stringer of Seattle, arrived in Frank on Wednesday morning, to take up the chase.

Dynamite and Lightning were two experienced dogs, having been on a hunt before, while Dan was little more than a pup.

There having been a downpour of rain during the night, their chances of picking up the trail would be most difficult. Although the dogs were given every opportunity to work, their efforts were without avail, the rain having saturated the ground to such an extent, that the scent was lost.

Wednesday night, the fifth night following the shooting, at just about sunset, a figure toiled painfully up the steep hill that led from the river at the Middle Fork to the railroad above.

Reaching the top it hesitated, a grim silhouette against the beauty of the evening sky. A cruel, menacing figure it was, glancing furtively across the long span of steel that bridged the river and coiled below.

Some impulse urged the figure on and dusk soon enveloped it. The station agent at Cowley sat in his office and heard the pusher's engine come to a stop outside the door.

Engineer Harry Hammond rushed in, wide-eyed with excitement. "The bandit is down the track," he cried. "Come on down and help me capture him." The agent looked up incredulously and asked, "What makes you think it's the bandit?" "I noticed him on the way down. It was dusk but I saw that he stepped off the track and kept his head down as the train went by. That is not normal. Folks always stand and watch the train as it passes them."

Col. Macleod, was subsequently notified and dispatched several of his men to the vicinity. The police were about to decide that once more their quarry had escaped when the headlight revealed a dark figure seated on the platform of the hay sheds at Fincher.

They found him, eating canned meat and crackers, that he had purchased at Alexander's store, across the way. Although armed with a .45 Colt automatic fully loaded, Bassoff did not attempt to flee.

It was apparent from the dejected appearance of the prisoner, that hunger, and suffering from the wound in his leg, had tamed his ferocious spirit and driven him to cover.

The accused who had been arrested by Constable Glover of the CPR police, was handed over to Inspector J. D. Nicholson of the APP, who took the prisoner to Lethbridge to await trial.

Bassoff was brought before Mr. Justice McCarthy and jury on the 12th October 1920 at Macleod, K.C. conducted the prosecution, while accused was ably defended by J. D. Matheson.

The courtroom was packed at every session of the trial and as the affair was reviewed step by step, from the time of the train robbery to the shooting of the two young policemen, indignation again ran high and it was with relief that the crowd finally heard the verdict that the jury brought in—"guilty."

His Lordship sentenced the accused to death, the sentence being carried out on December 22, 1920, at the Lethbridge Provincial Jail. Thus stern unflinching and righteous justice had exercised itself in bringing to a hardened and callous criminal, the responsibility of his human action in taking the life of another, in the severest sentence that the law can impose.

Two members of the gang had now been accounted for, but where was Auloff? Bassoff had informed the police that Auloff had left them shortly after the hold-up, over an altercation concerning disposal of the loot.

A description of the watch taken on Conductor Sam Jones, and believed to be in the possession of Auloff, had been circulated throughout the United States and Canada.

When hopes were waning of ever discovering the whereabouts of Auloff, word was received by commissioner of the APP that the watch in question had been pawned in Portland, Oregon.

Detective Schoeppe was sent to Portland, and working with the Portland Police, found the watch had been pawned for the sum of $12.25 by a Greek named Ali Hassan.

Hassan was located and stated that he had won the watch in a poker game, from a man who answered the description of Auloff. But where was Auloff now, after these three years?

Accompanied by Ali Hassan, who volunteered to aid in the search, Detective Schoeppe started out on the long trail, lasting several months. Tracing Auloff through several cities, mining and lumber camps of the north-western States, Schoeppe and Hassan finally located Auloff at a boarding house at Butte, Montana, where he was working in the mines.

The ex-Russian Cosack was brought to Lethbridge, having waived extradition, and on January 26th, 1924, was arraigned before Magistrate Barker, pleaded "guilty" to a charge of robbery with violence, and was sentenced to seven years imprisonment in the Prince Albert Penitentiary, but before the term expired, Auloff died in prison, closing the chapter of the most notorious train hold-up in the history of Canada.

The arrest of Alex Auloff, three and a half years after the commission of the crime, was an exemplification of the truth of the long arm of the law and justice.

It was a tribute to the vigilance and determination of the Alberta Provincial Police, and serves to that in a force comparatively young, there exists the old ideals and tradition, instincts, which have given a name and fame to the historic Royal North West Mounted Police, now known as the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.
